Words - Sweeter than Honey, Sharper than a Sword

Words are a way of expressing thoughts, ideas and emotions. They help us in communication. Many a times when used wrongly, they may hurt much more than a sword because it cuts through our mind and get placed in our hearts. Words can be sweet or bitter. It depends on the personality of the person speaking. Words contain all the emotions a person is feeling. In the past, people have struggled not only for freedom but also for freedom of speech. Why is freedom of speech a necessity? It is necessary because we are defined by the way we express ourselves through our words. One of the greatest freedom fighters of India Mahatma Gandhi had brought forward the idea of non-violence. He had suggested that instead of fighting with arms, they should fight with words. His idea was taken up slowly by everyone and they fought with the help of words. And the result is India is a free and democratic country.

Words when spoken with innocence are sweet but sometimes they may not be true. Sometimes it is better to be silent. Words are a part of our being and our soul. They touch even the innermost part of our soul and make us feel their intensity and emotion. Words are reflection of our thoughts so evaluate your words before you let them leave from your lips.
